

Our world is faced with a tumultuous challenge.

The ongoing COVID-19 outbreak is an unprecedented crisis, creating staggering hardships for communities everywhere. But we are encouraged by the many everyday heroes playing their part in the united response.

We are in this together, and this crisis requires concerted action from all of us. AnimalhealthEurope and our members, manufacturers of veterinary medicines and animal health products, are taking action on a number of levels to support the animal health community, our European society, and the wider world in this difficult time.

This is just a snapshot of the ongoing support from our teams.

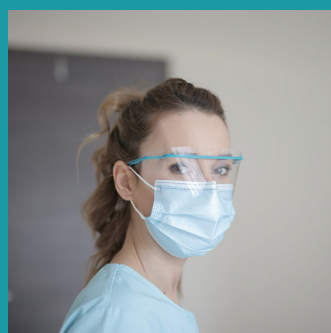

Donations have been made to Red Cross

Foundation charities across Europe, both financial and supplies of protective equipment for hospitals.

Coming together with other sectors, companies donated a total of one million euros to the Lombardy Region of Italy for the construction of a temporary hospital at the Milan Expo.

Hundreds of thousands of masks have been donated to hospitals and associations across Europe to protect key workers.

Over 600 thousand euros donations have been given to foodbanks across Europe and in the US where communities face food insecurity due to COVID-19.

Companies have ramped up production of hand-sanitiser gels and are making donations of sanitisers to local community efforts.

Supporting a hard-hit agriculture sector, stocks of tulips has been purchased in the Netherlands and donated to brighten up homes of people living in isolation.

Ethanol has been provided to local doctors for disinfectant use in some countries, and anti-inflammatory and anaesthetic products are being inventoried for potential supply to hospitals.

Health authorities have been granted access to biotechnology facilities and laboratories for coronavirus (PCR) testing, and are offered 3D printing facilities for the manufacture of respiratory masks.

Gloves and other protective equipment have been donated to support relief efforts, including for veterinarians to help them continue to provide essential services.

Employee donations to COVID-19 support causes are being matched by some companies.

In some cases employees with a medical background are allowed to take leave of absence to support their local health systems in the frontline efforts.

One million healthcare products donated, including over-the-counter medications and multivitamins, to support the health of under-served communities.
